The Arab Contemporary Intellect and The Problem of The Science of Future
Abstract

The research tries to illustrate that such a problem is conditioned historically and culturally by a net of the Arab community's relations with it self, by the quality of such relations with the other over the history, by its position in history, and by being active in it. Thus, the questions of the Arab intellect for the future about the future of the Arab intellect get together in the form of duets that have not been settled yet, culturally, philosophically, politically or historically.

The research also tries to analyze the essence of the problem in the light of the major task which faces this intellect with all its branches; that is, the task of criticizing the light of its relation with the Arab intellect, getting benefits from studying the Arab tradition in order to define the features of future and to rebuild the Arab historical identity.
